Teaching Experience

During my three years at Cambridge University, I taught Geography taster sessions to Year 12 students. The sessions were interactive and provided students with a taste of what studying Human Geography at university is like. I also tutored Geography A-Level to several sixth-form students from a local comprehensive school, helping them with aspects of their syllabus and providing them with advice on Geography university applications. I am continuing this work by volunteering my time to tutor secondary school students, through a charity providing pupils with support throughout the Covid-19 pandemic.

For three years at Fitzwilliam College, I undertook the role of Access and Outreach Ambassador. I regularly gave talks to visiting students about the Cambridge University admissions process, and provided them with advice on personal statement writing and interview preparation. I also gave regular college tours at University Open Days, and coached individual students from local sixth forms about applying to Cambridge. As a result of mentoring several students, I was delighted to hear of their successful applications to Cambridge. I have also delivered online Oxbridge admissions sessions to students from my previous secondary school, providing tailored advice and support.

Geography Tuition Approach

I tutor Geography at GCSE and A-Level standard. I have a flexible and adaptable approach to tutoring, and tailor the sessions according to the individual student's needs. I use a range of resources and techniques according to the student's learning style, such as using diagrams and presentations to explain key concepts. As well as working towards improving grades in Geography exams, I work with students to develop specific skills, such as fieldwork skills, analytical thinking, and essay writing.

I also tutor students for Geography university admissions. This includes providing support with writing personal statements, and preparing for admissions tests and interviews I have closely worked with Fitzwilliam College and the University of Cambridge to assist students with their Cambridge interview preparations, showing that I have a clear understanding of what is required to perform well as part of the process. I am able to offer students individualised and tailored support with their Geography Oxbridge applications, and assist them through reviewing personal statements and providing mock interviews.

Overall, I am a friendly, reliable and hard-working individual. I look forward to working with students and ensuring their progress in their studies at school.
